Established in 1990, the National Council for Science and the Environment (NCSE) is a nonprofit organization with a mission to improve the scientific basis of environmental decision-making. The NCSE Annual Conference convenes more than 600 leaders from science, education, government, policy, business, and civil society to advance science and solutions across these sectors on environmental policy and decision-making with the use of science.

The NCSE 2021 Annual Conference: Hot Water: Science and Solutions for a Planet Under Pressure will take a systems-approach to heat and water during this time of change—examining both impacts and solutions. NCSE 2021 will be a virtual conference that will explore the links between the changes in Earth’s physical systems and its social institutions.

Showcase Your Organization

Align your organization with this significant event and the enduring mission of NCSE. Showcase your organization’s support of science and sustainability to our multifaceted audience.

All sponsors are recognized on the conference website, on NCSE social media, in the conference program, and through the virtual conference platform. In addition, sponsors receive select complimentary and unlimited discounted conference registrations.
